Amy Adams

"I found out, when he checks in to a hotel, he uses 'Chandler Bing.'" On Justin Bieber using his Friends name as an alias,
Matthew Perry

"Cellphones would go off every night. . . . One time, I had it. I was like, 'Who is it? Turn it off!' . . . Silence. It turned out to be someone's hearing aid."

On an awkward exchange with her audience while doing a play,
Kate Walsh

"Sunday Rose chooses what she calls 'pretty dresses.' . . . Fingers crossed, guys. I could be wearing a tutu." On her 2-year-old styling her for the Oscars,
Nicole Kidman

"Toy Story 3 killed me."

On his tendency to get emotional while watching kids' movies,
Mark Wahlberg

"No one is laughing harder than I am."

On landing the cover of Vogue,
Lady Gaga

"I got a text from Bradley Cooper saying, 'Do you want to be in Hangover 2?' I'd had a couple glasses of wine and the kids were in bed, and I texted back, 'Yeah! When?'" On his cameo in the upcoming sequel,
Liam Neeson

"He says, 'I hate your movies. You owe me money for that last one.' I was like, 'Can I just finish my pee, sir?'" On being approached in a public restroom,
Adam Sandler

"I do get the odd bow, which I put down to either confusion or facetiousness." On people's reaction to him since playing King George V in The King's Speech,
